NAVY TREATY TO BE SENT TO SENATE NEXT WEEK

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Oh, yes, fishing season has started again and we'll be forced to eat out every time the head of the house has a day off.

* * * *

There are two things we don't like, and both of 'em are fish.

* * * *

In a family where every member of the family has the fishing bug and would rather fish than eat, it is just tough luck for one who cares nothing for the finny tribe.

* * * *

Yesterday morning while we were just getting into the last lap of our beauty sleep, the head of the house came into our room, awoke us and then proudly displayed a striped bass that was at least two yards long.

* * * *

And we refused to become interested at all.

Speaking of fish, ask any ex-service man how he likes "gold fish." Then duck.

* * * *

During the war some well meaning bomb proofer in Washington decided that fish should be made an article of diet for our fighters.

* * * *

As a result the government bought out the season pack of a large number of Alaskan salmon packers and sent the fish to Europe.

* * * *

The fighting men promptly dubbed the mess "gold fish" It was gold fish at breakfast, dinner and supper—and sometimes for a midnight lunch.

* * * *

As a result most ex-service men can't look a can of salmon in the face, without giving the recording angel writers' cramps.

* * * *

Speaking of the army, one can usually tell the branch of the service to which a man belonged by his talk. Sounds silly, but its true.

* * * *

When you see a soldier walk down the street, cocky and self confident, and with the air of "I'm good," you know he belongs to the tield artillery.

* * * *

When you see another soldier walking down the street, his legs bowed wide enough to roll a barrel between 'em, you know he's in the cavalry.

* * * *

And when you see another soldier, all decorated out in a tailor made unuiform and gee gaws and what have you, and with his nose lifted high in the air, you can bet a leaden dime that he belongs to the air service.

* * * *

And then, when you see another soldier walking along, looking business-like, self-confident, you know he belongs to the infantry.

* * * *

The infantry knows that it wins the war, looks upon the artillery as a bunch of jugheads, the cavalry as stable helpers and the air corps as a bunch of busted aristocrats.

* * * *

The infantryman never tells you how good he is . . . he KNOWS he's good and expects you to do the same thing.

* * * *

Which all goes to show you that an infantryman is always an infantryman, even in the newspaper business.

MOUNTAIN COMBED BY 300 MEN

REDDING, April 22.—UP— In the dark forests of Mt. Earney, where the snow lies deep even at this time of the year, 300 weary and footsore men continued their hunt today for a six year boy who was believed to be wandering aimlessly and helpless on the treacherous slope.

The boy is Asa Lee Lakely, Jr. He disappeared last Sunday when his parents were repairing their automobile. The child, apparently in search of adventure, explored the wood that runs back from the road on Mt. Burney and became lost in the undergrowth.

Late this afternoon Lieut. Harry Prosser, of the 91st observation squadron, Crissy Field, San Francisco, left for the scene to help in the hunt.

Dogs On Hunt

Accompanying Prosser in his Douglas observation plane was Corporal Patrick Murphy, a trained Army observer.

While Prosser and Murphy searched for the boy from the air an Indian, Walter Curl, and his dog headed the ground search.

The dog led a party to the boy's footprints at the point where he disappeared Sunday up the slope where the timber and snow line meet and where the nights are bitter cold.

Mother Waits

Anxiously the boy's mother waited at the concentration point of the search with five other children while the father, ever in the vanguard of the hunters, plodded thru the underbrush, sometimes up to his knees in snow, desperately searching for trace of his boy.

The last trace of the missing lad was found at noon today near Burney Spring, where Bud Lee, mill employe, found footprints thought to be those of Asa Lakely.

Spurred by this announcement, fresh recruits were sent from here by car this afternoon with provisions and the hunt continued on into the night .

Most apprehension felt for the boy's safety was due to the fact that many cougars and mountain lions are in the region, and deep crevasses cover the mountain. Lack of food, it was feared, would cause the boy to weaken quickly and succumb to the intense cold at night.

VETS PLAN EXERCISES

At a meeting in Berkeley of Richmond and Berkeley veteran organization committees Monday night, tentative plans for observation of Memorial Day at the Sunset View cemetery were discussed.

Although the complete program will not be arranged until the latter part of this month, several features were practically decided upon.

The ceremonies will commence in Richmond, with a parade of all veteran organizations, probably from Third street, up Macdonald avenue to Seventeenth street. From there the veterans will take automobiles to the Sunset View cemetery, where graveside services will be held.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will provide a firing squad; the Richmond Chapter of War Mothers will decorate the graves; the American Legion will provide the speakers and the Snanish War Veterans will furnish the buglars to play "taps" over the graves.

Dr. A. B. Hinkley will be marshal of the Veterans parade, and will act as master of ceremonies at the cemetery. A Berkeley marshal will be appointed to act as his assistant.

Under the auspices of the United Veterans of the Republic auxiliary, water services will be held at the Richmond San Rafael dock May 25 in respect to the navy dead.

The complete program for this service will also be announced at a future date.

PACT SIGNED AT LONDON MEET

WASHINGTON, April 22.—UP—President Hoover will submit the London navy treaty to the Senate next week and Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee expects immediately to proceed with its hearing, it was revealed today as the document was signed in London.

Hoover announced the treaty would be submitted to the Senate as soon as the American delegation, which sails from Southampton tomorrow, gets home. The Leviathan with the Americans on board is due in New York, April 29 or 30.

U. S. DELEGATES READY TO LEAVE

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., April 23 (Wednesday) The U. S. liner Leviathan, with the U. S. naval delegation on board was ready to sail early today for New York. The departure was set for six a. m.

NAVAL TREATY SIGNED BY DELEGATES

LONDON, April 22.— UP— At 12:40 p. m. today Chairman J. Ramsay MacDonald announced solemnly to the five power naval delegates seated around a horseshoe table in Queen Anne's drawing room of St. James Palace, "we have now reached the moment for signing the treaty."

One by one the delegates, led by Secretary of State Stimson, arose, approached a small table in the center of the hollow square, sat in a high-backed, gilt and red armchair and wrote their names on a parchment.

For 14 minutes the pens scratched. When, at 12:52 p. m. Matsuzo Nagai of Japan placed his signature at the bottom of the list, the London naval treaty of 1930, governing the fleets until 1936, officially came into being.

Speeches Made

Cameras clicked. Newspapermen took notes. There was an impromptu speech or two. Then, weary with three months of difficult negotiation, MacDonald brought the conference to a close at 1:18 p. m., with the words: "I finally and formally bid you goodbye."

Less than three hours later the chief French delegates were on their way back to Paris. The Italians arranged to leave for Rome at nine a. m. tomorrow.

FIREMEN TO MEET HERE

Richmond will be host to members of the Contra Costa Firemen's association, on May 27, it was decided last night at the session in Martinez. Sixteen cities hold representation in the association.

Herbert E. Rains, of the national board of fire under-writers, was the principal speaker at the meeting last night, talking on the national value of standardization of hose threads to fire departments.

At present threads on hose used by fire departments in various Contra Costa county cities do not correspond, and in case of emergency the hose of one city's department would be useless in another city, Rains said.

The question of removing grass near highways of the county was taken up, and a committee was appointed to report the matter to the board of supervisors.

Chief John Briones of Martinez called to the attention of the members of the association the danger of fires starting from vacuum cleaners when the implements pick up matches.

Special guests at the meeting were: Dr. A. B. Hinkley of Richmond and Supervisor C. H. Haden.

Richmond firemen attending the session were Captain R. A. Wells, Captain R. R. Myers, Hoseman I. S. Conrad, S. W. Pressler, W. C. Kates and Assistant Chief J. J. Barry.

FLIER SAVED IN LONG LEAP

SACRAMENTO, APRIL 22. —(UP)—The sole survivor of the once famous army air daredevils, "The Three Musketeers," escaped death today when he made a 2,000 foot parachute jump from his disabled plane.

The flier was Lieut. Irvin Woodring, of the 95th Pursuit group, Rockwell Field, San Diego. He had been "dog fighting" with Captain H. M. Elmendorff, commander of his group at the conclusion of the field exercises today.

"It's not clear in my mind just what happened," Woodring said. "I was straightening out of a dive when suddenly the ship went out of control. I fought it, but it seemed impossible, and I bailed out."

For several years "The Musketeers" thrilled air circus crowds. Then Lieut. F. J. Williams was killed while they were stunting at the National Air show in Los Angeles two years ago. A few months later, Lieut. W. L. Cornelius was killed during maneuvers at San Diego when his plane locked wings with another and his parachute caught on a wing tip.

BERMAN IN CUSTODY OF DEPUTIES

SEATTLE, April 22.—UP—Jacob Berman, one of the prominent figures in the collapse of the Julian Petroleum corporation, was arrested late today by King county deputy sheriffs on two Los Angeles warrants when United States marshall E. H. Benn refused to allow Berman to stay in the federal building where he had remained with immunity throughout the day.

S. B. Bassett, Berman's Seattle attorney, said habeas corpus proceedings would be instituted for Berman's release Wednesday morning.

Berman appeared at the marshal's office this morning offering to surrender himself to begin serving a seven year sentence in McNeil Island federal penitentiary but as the commitment papers failed to arrive from San Francisco Judge Jeremiah Neterer decided he had no authority to order Berman's arrest.

Berman for hours refused to leave the marshal's office while King county deputy sheriffs awaited outside to arrest him for Los Angeles authorities. Berman said he was willing to go to Los Angeles to testify but first wanted to become a prisoner of the government so he could merely be taken to California as a witness and not as a defendant.

Hearing on the application for removal to California of S. C. Lewis, former presiednt of the Julian Petroleum corporation, now a prisoner at McNeil Island, will be held in federal court here Wednesday. Lewis is resisting efforts of Los Angeles authorities to return him for trial.

U. S. FACES BIG DEFICIT

WASHINGTON, April 22.—(UP)—President Hoover solemnly today warned Congress against its making exact and added expenditures, asserting that the deficit of $30,000,000 for next year is already in prospect. Acts now in the progress of passage would authorize an additional $300,000,000 or $350,000,000, he said.

His warning brought only one immediate reaction a demand from Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, to know what bills he was talking about. Chairman Jones of the senate appropriations committee, said he did not know.

At the White House it was said that the president had some bills in mind,, but would not name them.

Borah noted in questioning of Jones that in the appropriations for government departments, congress geenrally, has voted less money than is recommended by the budget bureau.

This last of several warnings from the president was conveyed in letters to Jones and Chairman Wood of the House appropriations committee. Jones had his copy of the letter read to the senate.

The president's first comment on what he anticipated would be spent and its result, was made several months ago, and drew critical attacks from democratic and other senators. It was charged he was laying a smoke screen to hide other important issues involving a conflict between congress and the president, and to lay the blame publicly on congress. Another "economy" note struck recently by the president, received no attention to congress.

Congressional leaders pointed out the authorization of legislation mentioned by Hoover, mostly consist of long term building programs and the like, under which only a few millilons of dollars would be appropriated annually, and hence there was small possibility of a deficit much greater than anticipated.

DEATH TOLL MOUNTS TO 319

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 22.—(UP) — The State of Ohio today pushed forward its investigation into one of the most gruesome prison disasters in history—the death dealing fire which ripped up through the west cell block of the state penitentiary here last night.

While Governor Myer Cooper's committee of inquisition questioned witnesses today, the death list stood definitely at 319, with four of the 231 convicts injured reported as having little chances of life.

Focus of the governor's investigating board centered today on Thomas Watkinson, guard, who this morning was suspended from duty by order of Warden P. E. Thomas.

Orders Told

Watkinson is accused of having refused to relinquish the keys to the cells of the burning building, even at a time when screams of the dying men were echoing through the prison yard.

Called before the committee this afternoon, the accused man admitted that he had refused to give the keys to two guards who begged that they be allowed to free the convicts during the fire.

Watkinson said he had been ordered by his superior, Captain Hall, not to surrender the keys.

Guards On Duty

Testimony before the committee revealed that Guards Little and Baldwin, enraged by Watkinson's refusal to give them the keys, snatched them away from him and worked feverishly at unlocking cells until they were both exhausted.

While the governor's committee conducted its probe in the prison offices, a heavily reinforced guard patrolled the outer walls of the penitentiary.

More than 500 prisoners who escaped unscathed or with but minor hurts, were housed in temporary quarters. The entire prison was still in a state of chaos.

The Incubus of the In-Law

UNFORTUNATELY, most young men and women cannot follow that historic but of good advice—
We mean the counsel to "marry an orphan or live on a desert island"—
And the girl who, when she marries, collects a meddlesome set of mother-in-law, father-in-law and brothers-and-sisters-in-law—
Such a girl is as much out of luck as the young bride-groom
Who acquires, at the altar, an interfering collection
Of parents-in-law, aunts-in-law and other in-laws.
As for the case of the unfortunate pair, each of which
Presents the other with a full layout of new relations, all keyed up to run things—
What union is more likely to be unhappy than theirs?
Please don't think that we brand all in-laws, without exception, as interfering pests—
Some of them are nothing of the sort, as we have the best of the reasons for knowing.

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

Some are as friendly, as helpful, as loyal to their new relative by marriage
As his or her own kinsfolk could possibly be.
Unfortunately, there is also the Other Kind, the Incubus In-Law,
Who clings to bride, or bride groom—
And simply will not permit the luckless pair
To go the way they should—that is, to go their own way.
The trouble caused by such In-Laws is aptly illustrated
In the following letter which we have received from "Young Husband."
"A few years ago," he writes, "I met a very fine girl, who lived near me,
"And fell madly in love with her.
"We went about together for two years,
"During which period her mother, two sisters and two brothers treated me moderately well.
"But they knew that I could not afford to become engaged
"And they took great pleasure in asking me when we were going to take this important step.
"They talked so much about it
"That a year ago I made the plunge.
"Then these members of my sweetheart's family showed "That they were not entirely satisfied with her 'catch.'
"They made suggestions that she should give me up
"For a friend of the family who was quite wealthy.
"They told her that she never would be happy with me
"Because I had not enough money
"And because, if she and I married, we would have to live with my mother.
"Although my girl's relatives had met my mother only a few times
"They told their daughter and sister
"That her future mother-in-law would be a most terrible person to get along with.
"My fiancee repeated these criticisms to me.
"Although she did not suggest giving me up,
"In fact, she agreed with me that we should live with my mother at first,
"Since we came to the conclusion that we could not live anywhere else as cheaply.
"But my fiancee's family thought otherwise.
"Her mother threatened that, if we married under those conditions,
"She would never speak to her daughter again.
"She tried in every possible way to break up the match.
"My girl felt very badly, since she was much attached to her mother,
"And even decided to break the engagement.
"I met her the next day and tried to convince her
"That we should let no one interfere with our happiness.
"Finally she agreed and we hurried off and were married at once.
"Her family was very angry, when the news came out.
"And she went back to try to make up with them.
"They at once began to use all kinds of arguments
"To convince her that she should not live with my mother.
"She finally believed them, and things were pretty hard for me
"Because I could see no other possible arrangement.
"It was impossible for me to think of keeping two homes
"Since I could not afford it.
"At last I persuaded my wife to give our plan a trial.
"We went on our honeymoon and came back to my mother's, where we had our own rooms.
"We had scarcely returned when my mother-in-law became very ill.
"I was sincerely sorry for her
"And suggested that we go to see her as much as possible.
"It happened that one night, we did not visit her.
"The next morning my mother-in-law informed my wife, in no uncertain terms,
"That from now on she had to see her every morning and evening.
"My mother-in-law insisted that she had not long to live.
"This was eight weeks ago.
"Since then she has regained her health, and is up and around,
"Yet she insists that my wife must continue to go every day to see her.
"Anything that I say to my wife makes no difference.
"She really believes that her mother is doomed.
"This is not the case, for the doctor himself tells me
"That she is completely recovered and has many years to live.
"Now, I don't want my wife to stay away from her mother.
"That would be inhuman, to say the least.
"But I know that seeing her mother fourteen times a week is not good for my wife
"Because her family hate me so and try to make trouble.
"My wife works hard and co-operates with me in money matters,
"We both are busy all day long.
"I feel that we should enjoy together at least a part of our only free time—
"Evenings, Saturday afternoons, Sundays,
"But my mother-in-law has such a hold on the girl
"That we spend in her home practically all our free hours.
"I love my wife with all my heart,
"But I don't see how things can go on his way much longer."
Here, it seems to us, is a doubly unfortunate situation
With a mother-in-law at either end—
For the time that isn't spent under the roof of one mother-in-law
Is spent under the roof of the other.
The only answer, it seems to us, is to make a clean break away from each incubus in-law,
To make a home big enough for two, and only two,
And to stay in it, without asking any mother-in-law's help or advice.
For a house divided against itself—especially the house of the newly-wed—cannot stand!

Good to Know

The end sections of the old iron bed can be made into a thing of beauty. If you have a garden section that you want to set apart you will surround it with a hedge or perhaps you will just use the customary wire, and in either case swing your bed end on eyebolts and you will have an artistic garden gate for the entrance.

TELLING THE WORLD

HEAT BY MICROPHONE

MARCONI recently sent a spark through the air and illuminated a light half-way around the world. Out of this small beginning science now predicts we will soon be broadcasting heat waves just as sound waves are sent out now. There may be some good in radio, after all.

You will some day have warmth scattered by radio. When your loud speaker starts churning out rasping noises, that won't be static. It will be the equivalent of rattling steam pipes. On your little three-tube set you will be getting a ton of coal.

Heretofore "Red Hot Mamma" and other selections were the closest radio came to furnishing heat. Later on we will do even better than that.

To-night's radio program. By courtesy of the Fuel Administration:

6 P. M.—Heat, light and power by the Edison Company.

6.20—Artificial sunshine by Roxy.

6.35—Fuel song. "The Lost Cord of Wood."

6.50—Mixed quartet. Stove, egg, nut and pea. By request.

7.05—Bedtime embers.

7.20—Lecture on banking. By a well wnown furnace tender.

Of course that won't satisfy all the radio subscribers. They will write in to the stoking studio and complain that last night's heat broadcast didn't come in very clear. There were too many clinkers in it.

The announcer will say, "You have just been enjoying a ton and a half of Franklin coal. The next number on the program is a half tone of Pocahontas." Fifty listeners will phone in and demand Shamokin.

Fireplace owners will kick at the lengthy anthracite and bituminous programs. They will ask for an occasional load of wood.

When the announcer says, "Stand by, plesae, for five minutes," you will have to put on your overcoat. He will get no applause cards for that.

However, the heat waves will be better than jazz bands, after dinner speeches and bridge games. After all the hours we have wasted on those, it is time we got something useful.

Special! Grumpel's lumber yards have just caught fire! Graham McNamee will broadcast the intense heat from inside the twenty-five-yard fire lines.

But, as we were saying before that fire bulletin came in, warmth by radio is a great boon. It will be a pleasure to have white heat on the air instead of soft coal.

There will probably be some flaw in it, though. It sounds too good to be true. Just as soon as the heat starts coming in, some one will organize the announcers into a union and they will have a strike.

Then the boys that broadcast our heat will demand dress suits, more applause cards and eight silent nights a week. There will be conferences in Miami, Palm Beach and Atlantic City, but the heat announcers will refuse to go back to their microphones.

We will finally have to have an International Radio Week and get some nice warm heat waves from Wales. And if we can't get them from Wales, maybe King George would consent to breoacast to us again.

New Fashions for Sports and Street Wear

The sports coat of cream white basket-weave at left is trimmed with a shawl collar of wolf. The second coat is a tailored model of homespun tweed in red, beige and brown. Black telga cloth fashions the third coat, which is belted at an extremely high waistline and has an interesting cape banded in black galyak. The fourth model is of black silk crepe with an elbow cape and a discreetly flaring skirt. At the extreme right is a softly tailored coat of beige cashmere crepe. Collar of galyak and vertical seamings are notable details.

Addressing the Parcel

WHEN you mail a parcel do you always put the address on two, or perhaps more, sides of the parcel to make it easier for the postal employees?

Many persons do this, but they are hindering instead of helping. For instance, if the parcel is insured or sent as special delivery or special handling mail, it must be stamped on the address side to indicate what service it requires. You cannot expect a postal clerk to put more than one indorsement on the package, and if the address appears on from two to four sides it is quite likely that other clerks handling the parcel will see one of the duplicate addresses and entirely overlook the indorsement, so your parcel will not receive the attention you paid for.

So just place the address on one side of the parcel and put your own address above and to the left of this, so the parcel is not delivered at your door. For the same reason make the address to which the parcel is to be delivered more conspicuous than your own address. The latter is unimportant except in case of errors, but that of the addressee is necessary for the safe delivery of the parcel.

Some New Inventions

Paint of a dark greenish hue has been found in England to make airplanes nearly invisible when flying against clouds or in the rays of searchlights.

Made of steel, a sectional rowboat for one man that can be transported by automobile has been invented for fishing and camping trips.

The head of a new golf driver is hollow and has a hole in the bottom so that a whistling sound is made when it is swung squarely.

Wooden flooring blocks have been invented that are fastened together with pegs instead of nails and laid on a composition that deadens sound.

Portable electric apparatus automatically operated by an approaching train has been invented to sound a bell or flash a light to warn track workers.

Waterproof rubber oversoles for shoes have been invented that are light enough to be folded and carried in a raincoat pocket.

Composed of flat metal rings, a French inventor's rifle target automatically displays signals to show where bullets strike.

A ventilator pipe surrounds the smokestack of a poultry brooder stove that a Californian has patented to avert fire danger.

The front, rear or both ends of an automobile together can be raised with a new jack that is intended to be permanently mounted and operated by a crank at one side.

Having a triangular tip instead of a point, a new nail for packing cases is claimed to prevent the wood splitting and to hold more firmly.

An automobile thief alarm invented by an Australian sounds a bell and switches on an electric sign, "Stolen," when an unauthorized person turns on the ignition.

A Californian has invented apparatus to blow currents of air over fruit while it hangs on trees to remove rotting calyxes and prevent formation of jacket rot.

For signaling to airplanes at night, a New York man has invented rows of electric lights, set in the ground to radiate like wheel spokes from a central point and controlled by switches.

For keeping the stock in cigar stores moist, a new humidifier is operated by an electric flasher, being economical of current.

Driven by an electric motor obtaining power through a cable, a new lawn mower is equipped with a headlight for night use.

A refrigerator producing temperatures from 40 to 60 degrees below zero has been invented for testing rubber under the most extreme conditions of cold it would be likely to encounter.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

WHEN I was a boy I used to hear a conversation between two youngsters something like this:

"I went upstairs."
"Just like me."
"I went into a room."
"Just like me."
"I saw a monkey."
"Just like me."

The joke, of course, was on the boy who spoke last.

How like our lives is this little game! My neighbors have vacuum cleaners and ice machines just like me. They have country homes just like me. They have automobiles just like me and their sons have their own cars just like my boy has, and so it goes on down the line.

And finally, the day will come when my neighbors will all die JUST LIKE ME!

Shrewd Tiger

Clemenceau has become so much of a legendary figure that every kind of anecdote about him is being collected and published. The latest story, given by a London paper, is that of his negotiations for the sale of his book which, published simultaneously in French and practically every other language, is very shortly to see the light. In this episode we see Clemenceau as the business man, a hard bargainer, who, however, seems to have missed the psychological moment for clinching his bargain. As to the French rights, those he settled straight away with his usual publisher immediately he decided to write his book after Foch's funeral and the subsequent disclosures of the Marshal's views. Offers for the rights of the publication in English of "Grandeur et Miseres d'une Victoire" appear to have opened with a comparatively modest $10,000, which, however, Clemenceau promptly "rose" to $25,000. Then the news got among publishers that the book, although not even sketched out, was on the market, and from all sides offers began to pour in. Clemenceau, aided by a lawyer friend, used to hold meetings at his house of the prospective buyers, and, pitting one against the other, managed, it is said, to induce one of them to go up to the equivalent of $100,000, not a bad price for a book still to be written and as to the contents of which Clemenceau alone knew anything definite. But, undecided apparently as to exactly the lines on which he would treat, he let the moment for signing this contract go by, and finally, so it is related, got out of his book an unknown though much more modest sum. During these negotiations, which had lasted for three months, Clemenceau had proved himself a hard bargainer; but the moment he received the first instalments of his payments they became the source of numbers of the most generous gifts.

Dull Bohemia

The traditional gayety of the Latin Quarter has recently been under discussion. The general opinon seems to be that it is not very gay in the present, and the question is asked whether it was really ever very gay in the past. Courteline, who knew something about gayety, used to say that in his long experience of the Quarter he had never known it to be anything but sad and depressing. Others maintain that it used to be amusing, but no longer is it so since cafes like Vachette, Procope and d'Harcourt have disappeared and the Bal Bullier is no longer the festive place that it was. What are the reasons? Certainly there are few students who still live in the Quarter. The Metro and other means of communication have enabled them to lodge elsewhere, and apparently they go elsewhere to amuse themselves. The real culprits, however, are the women students. Their presence compels the men to be less wild than they used to be, and their competition forces the men to work harder if they are to keep a place in the sun at all. So the poor fellows are much more proper and much more depressed, and when they get away from work at all, they hurl themselves into "le sport," instead of spending their leisure in gayety and sentimental adventures.

Inundation Disaster

"In the depths of the forest lies the heart of the fatherland." So wrote the Frenchman Theuriet. He also said: "A people without forests is a people that dies." In these words lies the clue to the disastrous inundations which have swept through the South of France, causing incalculable damage and, what's worse, the loss of hundreds of human lives. Deforestation was the direct cause, according to the most eminent experts on that subject. Dense forests have a way of absorbing rainfall. When the forests are cut down, nothing prevents the heavenly waters from running down the valleys and creating conditions that existing safety measures cannot cope with. Such inundations as have occurred in the South of France are, therefore, not strictly acts of God, against which no human agency can prevail, as with earthquakes or tidal waves, but preventable accidents. This does not diminish in the least the desolation of the inhabitants, of course, or could make them less the objects of commiseration and sympathy. Modern research, however, has since long warned against the ruthless policy of deforestation as is practiced in certain countries, notably in America and Canada. What has happened in the Midi ought to make people give heed to these warnings.

PAINFUL CORNS

Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stickel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart, then loosens it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

"Corn Fly" for corns, 35c, "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" 25c, and "Corn Fly Bunion Remedy" 50c, (all three—$1.10 value—for $1.00), are sold under a positive money-back guarantee by Hi-Gene Co., Newark, N. J., or local druggist.

WORK OF TAX ASSOCIATION TOLD

The chamber of commerce of Concord was host to the Contra Costa division of the California Taxpayers' association. It was the monthly gathering of the Concord chamber of commerce, and the meeting was preceded by a dinner served by the women of the Presbyterian church, at which place the gathering was held. Charles H. Guy, president of the chamber presided and welcomed the guests. J. D. Keith, chairman of the educational section of the tax organization was the guest speaker of the evening.

Keith told of the organization of the county tax unit, and the purpose for which it was formed. Keith stated that the tax association was launched about a year ago by a few of the leading taxpayers of the county, and had since become affiliated with the state tax association. This year the work has become more intensified, and now a full time secretary, J. B. McFarland who was present at last night's meeting, is diligently pushing forward the work for which the local unit was organized.

Keith pointed out that the tax division now represents 75 percent of the taxpaying interests in the county. He stated that each day sees new adherants to the work that is being undertaken.

"The subject of the rising cost of taxation is the problem of every taxpayer of the county," declared Keith, "and what we constantly need is the addition of new members to aid in the effort before us."

Keith stated that despite the rapid decline in federal taxes, the taxpayers of the nation were paying a heavier burden in taxes than ever before. "Everywhere throughout the nation increasing state and county taxes have completely wiped out any savings made in the declining federal taxes.

"California has leaped from eleventh to second place in the cost of taxation, being only exceeded by the state of New York" decalred Keith. "In our own county between the period of 1919 and 1929" stated Keith, "our population has increased 23 1-2 percent, our assessed valuation increased 48.9 percent and our tax collections 132.6 percent, while our special assessments in the various districts have increased 123.9 percent."

The speaker pointed out that the time was approaching that the administration of the county schools would have to be centered in the hands of fewer trustees to effect a more efficient expenditure of tax money. Keith showed how the wealth per pupil in one particular district was $3000, as against the neighboring district's wealth of $360,000 per pupil. This latter advantage gave sending opportunities and desires, which the less fortunately endowed districts could not keep up with. But, as Keith pointed out, the less wealthy school district many times in its attempt to keep up with its wealthier neighbor floated ill-advised bond issues. Keith expressed the belief that if the unit plan of administration became effective, the combined assessed valuation would be available for equal distribution per pupil among all the school districts, and thus equalize each pupil's opportunity for securing equal educational advantages throughout the county.

In concluding his speech, which was enthusiastically received, Keith stated that one of the pleasing features in carrying on the undertaking, was the spirit of cooperation and helpfulness on the part of the supervisors and county officials many of whom are members of the county tax association.

ers, recruited from over the state worked assiduously throughout the day. The bodies were removed from the prison charnel house after 1 a. m. A large crowd milled all day in front of the building. Many were relatives of the convicts, who still were uncertain whether their kin had perished.

Governor Cooper returned to Columbus by plane from a Virginia health resort. He appointed his investigating committee this morning and named Attorney General Gibbert Bettman and Director of Public Welfare, Hal H. Griswold to take charge of it.

Warden Thomas was the first witness called before the committee. He was questioned closely regarding his personal part in the disaster.

No Fire Drills

He said there never had been any fire drills at the penitentiary because "I never wanted to see how quick the prisoners could get out."

"I made every effort to save the trapped men," he said. "I ordered that all cells be unlocked immediately when I learned of the fire."

Little and Baldwin, Thomas said were assigned as guards in G and H blocks. When the fire broke out in I and K, they ran to the guardroom and asked Captain C. Coddington for keys to cells in the burning building. Coddington refuse to give up the keys, the warden said, and the two guards took them away from him. Then they ran to the burning cell blocks where Watkinson had the keys opening into the corridors and tier ranges. Watkinson likewise forbade the two guards to enter, and they took the keys away from him, the warden testified.

No Rules

Asked why there appeared to be a lack of specific instructions in case of fire, Warden Thomas said:

"You cannot make enough rules to cover every detail in emergencies. I cannot, for instance, write rules telling an officer when to shoot. Guard Watkinson did not exhibit good judgment when he hesitated about giving up the keys."

Guard Baldwin, who with Little was one of the outstanding heroes of the disaster, testfied that he had no doubt that if had not been for the delay in obtaining the keys from Watkinson, he and Little would have been able to open every cell and save mony lives which otherwise were lost.

Watkinson in his tstimony, denied that he had answered Baldwin's request for the keys with the statement "I don't give a damn if they all die."

Hearing Today

When the governor's committee resumed its session at the prison at eight p. m. Attorney General Bettman ordered Warden Thomas to leave the ruins as they stand in order that the committee may make a personal inspection.

Persistent reports of new fire outbreaks at the prison were put to rest tonight by Fire Chief Nice, who told the United Press that at about four p. m. a wisp of smoke had been seen coming from the roof of one of the partially burned cell blocks.

The smoke was traced to a few smoldering embers in the upper structure and was doused quickly with a bucket of water.

Following testimony of several witnesses, most of which was repititious the hearing tonight was adjourned until ten a. m. tomorrow.

Bull will act as toastmaster, and will make a short opening talk sketching the importance of the Filice and Perrelli cannery company in Richmond's industrial program.

NAVAL PACT SIGNED AT MEET

pared a quick departure, the latter going to Southampton tonight to sail on the Leviathan at six a. m.

Stimson Leaves

Secretary Stimson, Senator Joseph T. Robinson and 33 other members of the U. S. delegation left Waterloo station at 8:30 p. m. for Southampton, accompanied by nine marines.

They were loudly cheered by a large crowd, which included many English flappers kissing the marines good-bye through the train windows.

It was understood that Stimson and his colleagues would use the Leviathan's new wireless telephone to put the finishing touches on the windup of their affairs here.

Say Goodbye

The Americans had called at No. 10 Downing street during the afternoon to bid MacDonald farewell. Stimson remarked that the Hoover - MacDonald conversations has now been incorporated in a treaty and he expressed his own and the president's thanks. MacDonald complimented the Americans on their energy and resourcefulness.

At 11 p. m. Senator David A. Reed spoke to America over a radio hookup on the Republican view of the conference. Thus the movement for ratification of the treaty by the United States was placed under way even before the delegates left London.

Hopes Held

Similar early efforts to obtain ratification were expected to be made in Tokio and London, so that the three powers which limited their auxiliary fleets could place the treaty into effect as among themselves.

In speeches which preceded the signing of the treaty both Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France and Marine Minister Giuseppe Sirianni of Italy expressed hope of reconcling their differences over the Italian parity claim so that those two countries might join the limitation provisions later.

Another Meet

It was learned that negotiations to this end most likely will be resumed in earnest when Briand and Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy meet at the League of Nations' council session in Geneva May 12.

MacDonald opened the meeting at 10:30 by announcing the next conference would be held in 1935 and that the 1931 conference scheduled in the Washington treaty would not be held. The delegates adopted his proposal to call the present treaty "the London Naval Treaty of 1930."

While the pact does not mention the League of Nations, MacDonald revealed the work of the conference would be continued at Geneva.

"Monitor" To Publish Dry Law Series

"Is Prohibition Worth While?" will be asked and answered in a series of 20 articles to appear in the Christian Science Monitor beginning May 5.

The editorial board of the Monitor in communicating the announcement of this series to its circulation representatives has said that this series will represent primarily an endeavor to approach the liquor question in its most modern aspects from a standpoint of calm, open-minded but searching rationality. The Monitor is willing to have all pertinent facts considered, whether apparently favorable or unfavorable to the dry law, and to this end will include in early articles of the series the strongest statements it can obtain from wets in criticism of national prohibition, accompanying them with replies by drys.

The Monitor then proposes to analyze prohibition as it is affecting the home, the workshop, the highway, the business world, the school, the churches, the social welfare institutions, the government and the individual. In each field the emphasis will be upon the clear facts and a logical, common sense interpretation of them, not upon any appeal to prejudice, emotion or denunciation. The Monitor expects this treatment will result in a well-rounded digest of "the why of prohibition," in which a dry may learn much about how to defend his convictions or a wet may find reasonable material for consideration.

STATE IGNORES EASTERN STYLES

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—(UP)—California sets its own standards for women's modes and fashions and is no longer dependent upon European or eastern style centers, in the opinion of style experts who have just visited the San Francisco Spring Style Show.

Hundreds of merchants and retailers of women's wear concurred in this opinion after seeing the chic modes presented at the style show, held in connection with Market Week.

Clothes for the modern western woman are designed with an eye to the needs, desires and tastes of the customers of this region, and are designed by western creators and stylists.

The stunning evening gowns, gorgeously colored silks and satins, smart street dresses, vivid lounging pajamas and sport costumes exhibited at the style show all reflected something of the freedom of outlook and a love of beauty that is a distinctive outgrowth of life in California, in the opinion of R. B. Funston, director of Manufacturers and of Wholesalers Association here in San Francisco.

"San Francisco has long been the chief center of western distribution for women's wear and women's fashions," said Funston, "but at the 1930 style show, manufacturers and designers of the city demonstrated that the west has become self sufficient so far as the creation of styles particularly adapted to the Pacific slope needs and requirements is concerned.

"Climatic conditions and conditions of life generally, differ so much on the west coast from those of the eastern and European style centers," Funston continued, "that of necessity we have developed here a demand for distinctive modes of our own.

SPORTS

HIGH SCHOOL 9 DEFEATED BY HAYWARD

Poor teams continued to be the jinx of the Richmond Union high school varsity nine yesterday when the local high school athletes were defeated 5 to 4 by the Hayward high school Farmers, owners of the booby prize thus far in the Alameda County Athletic league. Yesterday's contest was the second dropped by the Richmondites to the Hayward diamond artists, and the Richmond boys are still wondering why they are able to defeat league-leading teams such as A'ameda and Berkeley and yet lose to a mediocre squad.

Excitement reached a peak in the eighth and ninth innings of yesterday's battle. At the beginning of the eighth canto, Hayward was sitting pretty with a 5 to 2 lead. However, during the last minutes in that inning when the visitors were unable to find the ball, Rogers and Babich of Richmond crossed home plate to change the score to 5 to 4. However, only one Richmondite succeeded in getting to first base in the ninth inning, and two pop-ups and a fan ended Richmond's chances of victory.

Bono started in the box for the locals, but was hit out of the box in the first inning. Lemon took his place and twirled until the end of the game. Bono allowed four hits, and Lemon was nicked for nine. Connor pitched the entire game for Hayward, and allowed 13 hits.

The Richmond Union high school varsity will again see action Friday when it tangles with the Alameda nine on the local high school field.

NORFOLK, Va.—Dr. A. L. Leatherman of Indianapolis claimed he bought a collar button in 1886, and is still using it. W. H. Gary, oyster inspector for the 21st and 22nd districts of Virginia, bought two collar buttons in Richmond in 1883 and is wearing them now, he claims.

OUTBOARD BOAT SETS RECORD FOR TRIP

SAN FRANCISSCO, April 22.—UP—A 19-foot outboard runabout skimmed into San Francisco bay today under her own power, just 45 hours and 57 minutes running time from the San Diego Yacht club harbor.

The craft, manned by C. F. Crang navigator, and R. W. Oppie, pilot and mechanic, shattered all Pacific coast outboard records for ocean cruising, if not all similar records from other sections.

Chang and Oppie were drenched to the skin and had comlexions of parboi'ed lobsters. They moored and yelled:

"All O. K. How about some ham and eggs?"

They made the voyage in five legs, San Diego to Newport to Santa Barbara to Avila to Santa Cruz to San Francisco.

Twice, they reported, they thought the jaunt would end in Davy Jones locker; once in choppy waters off Point Mague, again in worse weather off Point Sur.

Married Pupils Do Better Work

EUGENE, Ore., April 22. —(UP) Student marriages have a decidedly good influence on college gradings, according to figures compiled for the University of Oregon by Earl M. Pallett, registrar.

The report showed that the average for all undergraduate students is 3.21, while that for married men is 3.06 and for married women is 2.37. The average for unmarried men is 3.41 and for unmarried women, 2.96.

Jimmy Duffy May Box Here

Efforts are being made by Promoter Charles Sommerland of the El Cerrito Athletic club to secure Jimmy Duffy for the main event on May 2, when the El Cerrito club will be reopened.

Local fans will probably be able to see some of the fastest boxers of the state in action in the El-Cerrito ring this season.

Bear Track Team To Lose Four Members

BERKELEY, April 22. —Now that the California-Stanford "big meet" is a matter for historians to discuss, track followers at Berkeley are busy plotting the prospects for 1931 and according to optimistic observers, they are good.

Thirteen Bears garnered places of fractions of points in fifteen events in the 1930 "Big Meet". Of these, barring unforseen accidents, nine will return to don the spikes in 1931.

However, the Golden Bears will suffer two serious losses: Captain Al Pogolotti and Emery Curtice, Captain of 1929, will both hang up their spikes after the I. C. 4 A. meet this May. Pogolotti is a hurdler, Curtice a javelin thrower who holds the state intercollegiate record.

Point winners in this year's meet with Stanford who will return next year, include Captain-elect Everitt "Spud" Mossman the courageous winner of both the mile and two-mile runs at Palo Alto; Ken Churchill, javelin ace, holder of the "Big Meet" record; Steve Akers, javelin; John Enright, high jump; Aubrey 'Jack' Johnson, 440; Bill Koblick and George Pool, pole vault; Dick Rice, high jump; and Julius Zenman, half mile.

Among the non-point winners who have, nevertheless, played a part in the competitions of this season are: Thomas Luce, 440; Lowell Bondshu, hurdles; Fred DeBerry and Henry Schaldash, weights; LeRoy Cameron, discus; Richard Mansell, high jump; Spencer Sparks, sprints; Theron Wright, 880. Clarence Lang, discus, although he did not compete this year, looks like a good prospect for next season. Bill Barlow, who pulled a muscle this season, may come back into the sprints or middle distances in '31.

In addition to Pogolotti and Curtice, about a dozen point winners of the season are lost. They include Leonard Brown, weights; Bill Bias, broad jump; Spenser Eisby, sprints; Fred Henderson, two-mile; Tony Jacklevitch, high jump; Ben Lom, broad jump; Alva Novo, mile; Everette Scrivner, pole vault; Bob Ulsh, hurdles Tom Werdel hurdles and Russ Wilson, sprints.

The 1930 freshman team, which missed a "Little Big Meet" victory by less than three points, will send up a number of good prospects for competition in 1931. Frank Lucas, the "iron man" distance runner, will be abailable for either the mile or two-mile; John Robosson and Harry Bell, the latter captain of the Bear Babes, are both good prospects in the sprints.

Herman Albers and Bob Neuhaus were both average freshman quarter-milers. The Bear Babes were shut out in the high hurdles but scored a clean sweep in the lows: Jim Brophy is the best prospect in the latter event. The 880 was a weak event.

John Kearney, who broke the meet record in the javelin throw heads an impressive list of spear throwers which includes Jim Miles and John Hunt, both of whom have tossed the javelin out around 180 feet. Charles Vantress, pole vaulter, another new record holder, is a good prospect in his event. The weights, broad jump and high jump were weak events.

Two Captains Of U.C. Teams Named

BERKELEY, April 22. — Two new captains have been named by athletic teams of the University of California, following the completion of the regular intercollegiate season. They are Everitt "Spud" Mossman, distance runner, who will head the track team in 1931, and Harry Butler, third baseman, new skipper of the Bear nine.

Mossman, who accomplished the remarkable feat of winning both mile and two-mile runs against Stanford, succeeds Alfonso 'Al' Pogolotti, hurdler, as track captain. Butler will fill the shoes of John Valianos, second baseman.

Both are at present junior students in the College of Letters and Science. Mossman is registered from Nampa, Idaho, while Butler's home is Oakland.

YANKS BEATEN IN FIFTH GAME

By UNITED PRESSS

American League:

Close games featured the American league competition Tuesday, all of the contests being decided by a single run and two of the games going into extra innings.

Buddy Myer's single with two on in the twelfth inning allowed the Washington Senators to take the first game of the series with the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3. Ruffing went the route for the Red Sox, while Burke, Liska and Marberry worked for the Senators.

Al Thomas outpitched Wes Ferrell and Willis Hudlin and the Chicago White Sox moved into second place with their second consecutive win over the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3. Thomas held the Indians to 8 hits and except for the seventh inning when Cleveland tallied three runs, kept the Tribe well in check. Chicago scored twice in the first inning, added a run in the sixth and nicked Hud'in for the final tally in the eighth.

Bing Miller, who drove home the winning run in the final game of the 1929 world series, homed in the ninth to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 7 to 6 victory over the New York Yankees.

Ted Gullic, rookie outfielder, drove in the winning run in the St. Louis Brown's 13 inning, 5 to 4 win over the Detroit Tigers. Sam Gray had the game well in hand but weakened in the ninth and was relieved by Stewart who got credit for the victory.

National League

Only two games were played in the National league, New York and Boston being rained out and the opening home game at Pittsburgh not being scheduled until Wednesday. An opening day crowd of 40,000 saw the Chicago Cubs, 1929 league champions, drop their opening game while only 6000 turned out to see the Phillies celebrate their home opener by moving out of the cellar.

"Wild Bill" Hal'ahan scored his second victory of the year over the Chicago Cubs, pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8 to 3 win. Hallahan, who let the Cubs down with two hits last week, allowed five hits today but no two blows came in one inning. Hack Wilson drove in all of the Cubs' runs with a homer after passes put two men on base.

The Phillies finally found their batting eyes and pounded Elliott and Morrison for 13 hits to give Sugar Sweetland his second win over the Brooklyn Robins, 6 to 5. The Phillies got away to a three run lead, but soon lost the advantage, winning by a three run rally in the final two innings.

OAKS DEFEAT SEALS IN FIRST

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—UP—Oakland went into first place of the Pacific Coast league today by beating the San Francisco Seals, 13 to 7, while Sacramento was trouncing Los Angeles, which has held the exalted position since the first of the season, 8 to 2.

The Oaks deserved their victory by a display of fighting spirit after their opponents had scored seven runs on five hits in the first inning. Thereafter the Seals were blanked and the Oaks made nine runs in the second an dthird innings alone.

Los Angeles made three costly errors and the Senators really won the game with three runs in the first inning.

Breaking a tie with two runs in the ninth inning the San Francisco Missions defeated Portland, 5 to 3. Seattle and Hollywood's Sheiks engaged in a see-saw encounter that was twice tied before the Indians won, 7 to 6, with a run in the seventh inning.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SYNOPSIS

Married to a South Sea island beauty, Blackney's brutal husband, she and David Wade carry on a prosperous trade with the natives. While the ship is gone with their first cargo, David and Stella quarrel about Moira, a half-caste girl living with them since her father's death. She learns that David and Stella are not married and tells Stella she intends to win David. In despair, Stella enters an oarless boat and is carried out to sea. David repents and asks Moira to lend him her schooner to search. Moira refuses unless he marries her.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

It showed on the curve of the sea, far away, a scarcely discernible speck. Wade stared at it. That speck was the most significant thing in the world. It was the world itself.

"The cutter!" he echoed.

"Might be they picked her up!" cried Lo-oru, voicing the thought that was his, but which he scarcely dared to utter.

Wade sent to the house for his binoculars; and for an hour he stood there on the beach, watching the speck resolve with exasperating slowness into mast and sail and the white streak of a hull, the binoculars to his eyes the while, scanning

"I'll make you happy, David! You are my mate!"

the deck as it grew visible for sign of the white of a dress, and seeing only the brown of the crew-boys' backs. And, when at last the craft had threaded the passage through the reefs and swung up to the anchorage at the lagoon, he boarded one of the canoes in which the villagers were impatiently putting off, and skimmed alongside.

Dolobe's fuzzy head looked down at him over the rail. The crew were handling the descended sails and crying messages and greetings to their friends.

"A bad thing has happened, master!" said Dolobe excitedly.

Wade scrambled up the side.

"Have you found her?" he projected the words rather than spoke them.

"Very nearly they caught us!" Dolobe went on in his excited way, apparently not having heard Wade's question, or, having heard it, not understanding it. "We stopped three days at Tema. Three days, that all; and then we started to come back. And half-way we ran right into them. Twenty canoes—war canoes; and every one got might be fifty men, warmen with plenty arrows and spears, and their faces all painted——"

"Damn it!" Wade put in. "Why can't you answer me?" Did you see anything of the sinabada! Did you?"

Dolobe shook his head and for a moment abandoned the tale of his adventure in order to stare at the white man perplexedly.

"Not see her," he said. "What for we should see her?"

"She is out there somewhere in a canoe."

The native shook his head again. "The only canoe we have seen is them war-canoes."

He went on with an involved and circumlocutory account of how the canoes came still closer and of how flights of spears came quivering in among the crew. Wade scarcely heard him.

"So, at last we turned and get the wind behind us, and sail back quick for Tema," Dolobe was saying. "And very soon we leave them canoes behind. We stopped at Tema till the storekeeper he say he think them canoes all gone. Then we come home."

Wade collected his wits. The coming of the cutter had, after all, improved the situations considerably, he said to himself. He was now independent of Moira. He turned to Dolobe. The native was finishing his tale:

"They are the Umus, the worst people in the Solomons. Man-killers and woman-stealers. All the time they do like that. All the time they go out in big war-canoes and fight the small villages. Their chief is a very bad man. His name is Kapa."

"Dolobe!" Wade ordered, "take the two small boats ashore, and the water-bags, and fill the cutter's tank. Hurry! We are going to look for the sinabada——"

"She went in canoe?" Dolobe had suddenly remembered Wade's question on coming aboard.

"And there is no paddle in it. She is drifting. That way." He indicated the south. "Now, get a move on! She's been gone all night. I'll tell the crew that they are to leave again at once."

He called them to him; but the villagers had already told them of Stella's disappearance, and they offered their services willingly. At his order they ran to launch the small boats, dropping them overside, with a great splashing. Dolobe laid a hand on Wade's arm.

"Master, did you say she went that way?" He nodded in the direction from which the cutter had come.

"Yes; now, don't stand there——"

A sudden look of consternation had come on the native's face. His eyes had grown big and round. His grip of the white man's arm tightened. He lowered his voice.

"Master, yesterday, just before the sun it go down, I saw something out there. It was canoes, I think. Many canoes. I——"

He paused, and looked round as though afraid of being overheard. "Yes, yes; go on!" cried Wade impatiently.

"I think it was the Umus, come back. I am not sure; I only think so. They were long way off. Just little marks on the water."

He lowered his voice still further. "S'pose they been find the sinabada——"

Wade could not speak, not even utter an exclamation of horror. The dreadful possibility seemed, for the moment, to disturb the mechanism of speech. He ran to the rail, climbed down into one of the canoes, took up the paddle, and sent it skimming to the shore with all his strength. The small boats were already at the beach, and their men taking the water-bags up to the village spring.

Moira came out from the living-room as he ran up the steps.

"She is not on board, eh?" she said. "Lo-oru told me——"

"Get out of my way!" He pushed past her into the room. She followed.

"What is it, David?"

He ran to the wall, where hung the revolver and two rifles which had accompanied him in his gold-seeking in the New Guinea hinterland, and took them down.

"There is a chance she had been captured by war-canoes," he said shortly, trying the locks and levers of the rifles as he spoke. "We might need all the weapons we've got."

She came closer to him. She was fully dressed now, in diaphanous white, and her hair was coiled high on her head.

"War-canoes!" she repeated.

"The Uma men." He took from a shelf some boxes of cartridges.

"I have heard of them. They are a bad lot." She touched him, tentatively, lightly, as though it were an adventure.

"You—you will be in danger," she said a little quaveringly.

"Your father's rifles," he said. "Get them out! And the ammunition for them. Quick! Every minute counts."

For a moment she stood there looking at him, her light touch still upon him. Then she slowly withdrew her hand, and went to her room and brought two rifles and several packages of cartridges.

"David——" she began as she laid them on the table; and her voice was strangely weak and wavering.

Wade half-turned.

"Well?"

"There will be danger. You might get hurt." She held out her arms to him in a gesture all the more appealing because it was fine and free.

"I—I can't think of you being hurt—being in danger. David——"

"Don't think that anything you can say will prevent me going," he cut in. "You can put that right out of your head."

"Oh, I know you will go! It's not that! David, David, take me with you! I couldn't stay quietly here while you—you—were away out there."

The half-singing note came into her tone again:

"Where you go must I go also. You are my mate. My mate!"

"It's no job for women!" he said gruffly, not a little affected.

"Don't leave me here, David!" Her voice had become deep-toned and resonantly musical, with a throb in it akin to a sob. "I won't stay, anyway.

"I'll follow in the schooner. But I want to be with you—my dear! with you!"

OPEN HOUSE TO BE HELD AT SCHOOL

Richmond citizens interested in public schools may visit classes in machinery, woodwork and art at the high school tonight, when these departments will be in full operation for the benefit of visitors.

This being the eleventh annual observance of a week set aside for "Know Your Schools," each unit of the Richmond school system has issued an invitation to attend the classrooms.

In view of the increase in school enrollment from 4582 in 1921 to 6026 in 1930 and in the number of teachers from 137 to 231, citizens may get some idea of the growth of the system in recent years, Miss Nora Ashfield, assistant superintendent of schools, said.

In 1921 there were nine elementary schools and one high school. In 1930 there are 11 elementary schools, two junior high schools and one high school, Miss Ashfield pointed out.

"If comparisons were made between the school procedures of today and those of even ten years ago, the outstanding feature would be that much more time is devoted to emphasizing cultural values which must come out of education. runs in the second and third indren of today must receive training in the worthy use of leisure time and to make creative use of leisure hours in order to develop individuals who will be eminent and successful. The changing conditions of society have made demands upon the schools for a more varied program to meet the needs of the coming generation in this one matter alone. Our Richmond schools will be pleased to demonstrate what is being done in art, music, physical education, home making and other phases of instruction that go hand in hand with the three R's."

INTEREST, DEBT REDEMPTION LARGE ITEM OF COUNTY EXPENSE

The Contra Costa division of the California Taxpayers' association has made analysis of the financial statement of Contra Costa county recently issued by County Auditor Sullenger and his staff.

Among the larger items of expenditure is that for "interest and debt redemption." In fact this item ranks third and for 1928-29 was only just a little less than the expenditures for highways and bridges.

The total expended for interest and debt redemption in 1928-29 was $496,091. This covers only amounts expended on court house bonds, highway bonds and school bonds; it does not include sanitary districts or road improvement district bonds. The 1928-29 expenditure represents an increase in annual expenditure of $395,337 over 1919, or an increase of 392.4 percent.

The total expended for each class of bonds was:

Court house (1903 issue)	$ 3,360.00
Highways	186,625.00
Elementary schools	171,471.25
High schools	134,635.00
Total	$496,091.25

More than half of the total amount expended in 1928-29 was for interest. The figures are:

Interest	$263,841.25
Bond redemption	232,250.00
Total	$496,091.25

These issues required a total expenditure in 1928-29 of $306,106.25 of which a great deal more than half was for interest. The amount expended for interest was $137,856.25 and for redemption of bonds $132,250.

The school issues are exceedingly numerous; in general, they run for 25 to 30 years and bear 5 percent interest. This results in a total cost of between $1.65 and $1.77 for each $1 borrowed. Richmond Union high school bonds of 1925, to be retired serially by 1965, will have cost a total of $2.02 for each $1 borrowed.

Kahn of Napa council; Friday, "Boys' Reading Program" by John B. Kaiser, librarian at the Oakland public library; Saturday, "Measure of a Good Troop and Scoutmaster," by Dr. Tully Knoles, president of the College of the Pacific.

AERIAL STARS IN CIRCUS HERE

There are hundreds of internationally famed artists with the Cole Brothers circus this year, and when the big show exhibits in Richmond on Saturday, May 3, many marvels of the arena will be shown for the first time in this city. The big show is brand new from one end to the other this year, and this includes the personnel of acrobats, equestrians, clowns and aerialists.

All of last winter was required for the selection of the artists to compose the performers staff of the Cole Brothers circus for this season. The circuses of the Old World were drafted for their feature acts and new talent was unearthed from every possible source. The months of work were not in vain, either, because it is universally considered that the Cole Brothers performance this year is unsurpassed in the history of American circusdom.

Among the featured acts is the team of Lyle and Irma Conner, brother and sister, who execute difficult dance steps on a lofty tight wire. Irma Conner besides being an unusually gifted tight-wire artist is also a talented equestrian. Her versatility has won for her enduring fame in the circus world. This fame is well earned for it represents years of hard study and hard work in the profession. Miss Conner, a member of a noted family of performers, left the circus world when she entered her girlhood, to study in a select girls school. Later she attended college with the purpose of teaching as her life work. After graduation, however the lure for the sawdust became too decisive and with her brother, Lyle, she decided to return to the heritage of her youth. Since the advent of Lyle and Irma Conner in their new act they have mounted the ladder of success until now they are on the topmost round.

Other spectacular features of the Cole Brothers circus are as follows: Madam Julia Rebras, the intrepid French artist, who faces death twice daily in her loop the loop on a bicycle; the Hollis riding troupe, champion bareback equestrians, with Pinkie Hollis, the greatest somersault rider of all times; DeLong Sisters, Belgium's sensational equilibrists; the Brock Trio, Viennese areialists, in perilous lofty mid-air feats, somersaulting from flying trapeze to bar in single, double and triple revolutions; Koban and Sakata, equilibrists of Japan, who walk up a flight of steps on their heads; Maxwell trio, triple bar gymnasts, and scores of others.

Among the forty famous clowns with the Cole Brothers circus are: Harry LaPearl, Fred Leslie, Chick Reed, Billy Sells, Lou Hershey, Harry Loy, George Wayman, and Rube Dyer.

Prof. Benj. Fowler and his Military Band of 25 soloists present concerts twice daily beginning at one and 7p. m. Four other bands are carried with the circus this season.

Five acres are necessary to house the tented city of the Cole Brothers circus; the amount of capital invested is nearly a million dollars. Six hundred people travel with the circus and more than 400 animals are carried this year. This includes two great herds of elephants. The big top will comfortably seat 5000 persons.

At 11 a. m. on show day the spectacular parade will wend its way through the downtown streets. Doors to the immense menagerie open at one and seven p. m. and the big show performances start promptly at two and eight p. m.

SANTA ROSA, April 22.—UP—A student pilot and two passengers were brushed by death today.

The pilot, Merle Dibble, 17, a student flier and member of the Santa Rosa flying club, attempted to land his plane three times and finally crashed it against a steel power standard.

P. G. E. Merger Probe Asked

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—A request was received today by the State Railroad commission that the Pacific Gas and Electric company and the Great Western present valuations of properties to be involved in a proposed merger.

The demand for the presentation of the valuations was made by Preston Higgins, city attorney for Oakland during the hearing today by the commission on the merger.

"A conglomeration of estimates having no unity and obviously furnishing no basis for any conclusion by the commission," was the way in which Higgins described the valuations already submitted by the two companies.

C. P. Cutten, attorney for the P. G. and E. opposed Higgins, declaring that the valuation estimates were as correct as obtainable.
